

Most envelopes come in two standard orientations:

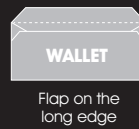

Pocket or Wallet Envelopes vary in weight...

...from a lightweight 70 grams to a heavyweight 130 grams. Heavyweight papers are stronger and offer greater protection. They also create a great first impression.

1 What is the size of the item you are sending?

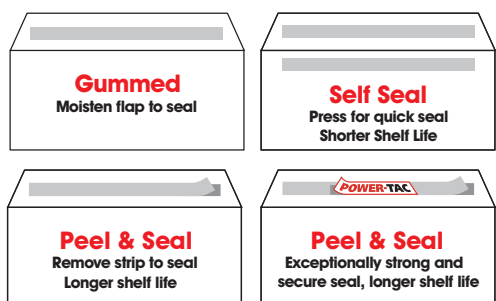

2 What type of envelope do you require?

GUSSET Expandable envelopes are for sending bulky items	BOARD BACKED Hard backed envelopes are for sending items which need to remain flat	COLOURED WHITE MANILLA
SECURITY Security envelopes are tear & burst resistant, offering protection for important documents	POLYTHENE Polythene envelopes are light and strong and ideal for mail order	WAGE A cost effective way to hand wages and wage slips out to employees
WINDOW The size and position of the window is always described with the flap upwards*

*Window size is measured height (A) x width (B). Window position is measured by the width in from the left-hand side (C) and the height up from the base (D).

3 Choosing different sealing options...

Gummed Envelopes
Also referred to as 'lick & stick'. This is the most common sealing method. Moisten the layer of adhesive along the envelope flap, and close.

Self Seal Envelopes
Contains a strip of gum on each flap which when pressed together forms an instant bond.

Peel and Seal Envelopes
Peel away the release tape from the flap to reveal a strip of gum and press down to form an instant bond.

4 Sending your items...

Don't pay more than you need to: The price you pay to send an item by post, depends on its size, weight and thickness. Packages that can fit through a recipients letterbox will be delivered on the first attempt, leading to a reduction in costs associated with repeat deliveries.
